

A wide-angle photograph of a large, calm body of water, possibly a lake or a wide river. In the foreground, a person wearing a light-colored shirt and a hat is standing in a small, narrow wooden boat, using a long pole to navigate. The water is still, reflecting the sky and the distant landscape. In the background, there is a line of green trees and hills, with more distant mountains visible under a cloudy sky. Several small, dark, vertical objects, possibly tree stumps or poles, are scattered across the water's surface.

Volunteering with AfID in Cambodia

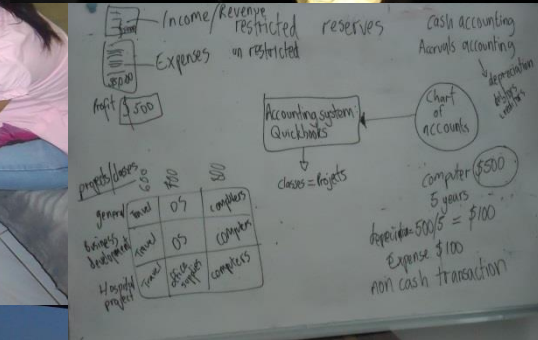

Jo Dufton

Why these placements?

Why return to Cambodia?

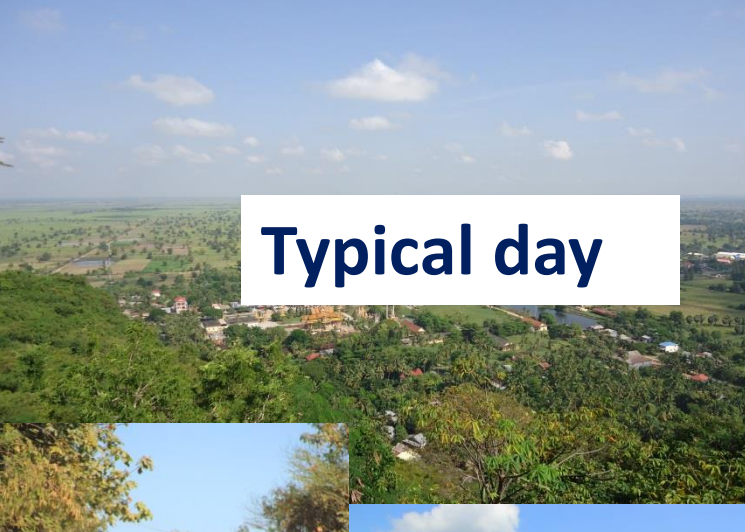

Using skills & experience

Long term placement vs. short term placement

Typical day

Living in Battambang vs. Phnom Penh

Advice and tips

- Why you chose the placements you did?
- Why did you choose to return to Cambodia a second time, and why through AfID?
- How did you feel your skills/experience benefitted you?
- What accounting skills you used on placement (what specific tasks did you do)?
- What non-accounting tasks did you help with?
- What were the differences of undertaking a longer placement versus a shorter one – both in terms of familiarising yourself with the organisation but also in terms of scope of work.
- A typical day at work, life outside the office, living in Battambang versus Phnom Penh?
- Any funny stories/incidences, what value you felt you added.
- Also what advice/tips you'd give future volunteers. For this last one, if you could just run these past us, as some of the advice/tips might be standard support that we provide to volunteers.

- Advice and tips
- Why these placements
- Why return to Cambodia
- Using skills and experience
- Long term placement, short term placement
- Typical day
- Living in Battambang, living in Phnom Penh

